Think of yourself as being an English language helper or a live-in English tutor to people whose first language is not English. You will give informal lessons where you determine where the students are at and then add to their vocabulary to improve their English conversation.

It may be the parents or children who you are helping to improve their language skills.

You will usually tutor the family members for around 15 hours a week, from Monday to Friday. It is expected that you'll do some pre-planning and bring some printed materials with you – or do it in your spare time overseas – so that lessons have some basic structure.

Live-in... with your host family and teach them conversational English for a few hours a day. Explore your new surroundings in your free time!

MORE ABOUT THE ENGLISH TUTOR ROLE

WHY CHOOSE JCR?

- Professionalism, safety, security and care – from your first phone call until you return home after your trip.
- We are recognised by the major industry associations – IAPA (international) and CAPAA (Australia), and abide by the highest industry standards.
- JCR has a wealth of experience – we have been placing people with host families around the world since 1992
- JCR offers vetted host families and provides a signed placement offer that protects you.
- We aim to help you to find the best family match for you so that you have a great time abroad.
- In-country support in case of any problems, and rematch with a new family at no extra cost if required.
- JCR also offer reputable, competitively priced travel insurance.

No teaching qualifications are necessary – just a desire to be an enthusiastic and fun helper as you explore every day English words and basic sentences.

As many families request teaching mainly in the evenings, (e.g. 5pm – 9pm) you have the entire day to explore.

Weekends are your free time, giving you more time to travel further afield.

During Summer you may be asked to teach in the mornings instead, as the children are on school holidays. Or you may be asked to join the family at their holiday destination.

With a deep focus on cultural exchange, our host families are not only excited to improve their English but also can't wait to share the characteristics of their country - its culture and cuisine with you.

Although you are not expected to have formal teaching qualifications, you are expected to be proactive and to try to engage the family members in conversation so as to improve their speaking skills.

It might be simple flashcards with the children, a trip to the market to practice vocabulary, or calling out the English word at home for everyday household items.

When to go

Placements 1 – 3 months are available all year round. Apply at least 2 months before you want to go.

Travel more - spend less

You don't earn a wage from your Teach English work, but you receive all accommodation (own bedroom) and meals, provided by your host family.

This would normally cost you around 700+ Euro a week as a traveller. So you can spend more money on sightseeing, shopping, souvenirs - and enjoying your time away.

Your responsibilities

- Plan ahead for your teaching sessions so you are prepared
- Help clean up after meals
- Keep your room tidy and in a reasonable state
- Pay for your phone bill and other personal expenses
- Respect the rules and routines of the host family
- Your role in the host family is as a tutor or 'language assistant' so you are not expected to perform domestic chores
